

Parent Support Map

FOR THE PARENT

Writes down who is actually in your corner and what each person can realistically do. Single parents in particular hold far more than they name, and naming it is where asking becomes possible.

When: Whenever you are carrying this alone

What I am carrying right now

All of it. Work, money, this child, other children, your own parents, your health.

Who is actually available

Be specific about what each person can genuinely do. "Anything" is not a plan.

Person	What they could realistically help with	Have I asked?

Help that is not a person

- ☐ The school counsellor — theirs, and mine to call
- ☐ 211 — free, any hour, finds local help of any kind
- ☐ My employer's assistance programme, if there is one
- ☐ A parent group, online or in person
- ☐ My own doctor
- ☐ A faith or community organisation

The one thing I will ask for this week

One. Named person, specific ask, by a specific day.

If it is heavier than this sheet

If you are in crisis, call or text 988 in the US, any hour, free and confidential. If you are in immediate danger, call 911. Needing help with this is not a failure of parenting; it is the most common thing in the world.

WORTH KNOWING

- ◆ People say no to "can you help?" and yes to "could you collect her on Thursday?"
- ◆ Write the list before you need it. Nobody thinks clearly at 2am.
- ◆ Your own doctor is on this list for a reason.
